The law of Moses was given to teach what the Lord requires. Meditation on the law taught judgment; the severe punishments of the law demanded mercy; and through the sacrifices and prayers humility was openly displayed as thousands of animals bled for sins.

Judgment, mercy, and humility were divinely revealed to humanity so that even today the world's religions hold them up as the most noble religious pursuits. Of course, the entirety of the law is contained in two maxims that Jesus identified: love thy God, and love your neighbour as yourself. "On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets." – Matt 22:40

Yet, after thousands of years of living under the law one thing was evident: no one is righteous (Romans 3:10). No man can give God what he required: "there is none that doeth good, no not one" (Rom 3:12).

It is impossible to do all that God requires for righteousness. The purest requirements of judgment, mercy, love, and humility remain only dreams to a cursed world filled with sinful people.

Our apostle Paul after receiving the mystery revelation of Jesus Christ wrote, "Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith" (Gal 3:24).

He fulfilled the righteous judgment of God against sin through his death on the cross (Rom 3:25). The richness of his mercy through Jesus provided life to sinners (Eph 2:4, Rom 5:8). Lastly, it was Christ who humbled himself being made in the likeness of men so that he could do what no one else could:
